

MONTHLY DOSE OF HAPPINESS

MARCH, 7 2021

Your Happy Journey love her community

10 CLEANING QUICK AND EASY TIPS

Having an internal company newsletter is a great way to address employee engagement, communication, and collaboration, but it comes with one catch: you need a wide readership. While you can include important articles in a newsletter, getting your employees motivated enough to read it is the extra leap you'll need to take. The key to this challenge is to make sure you organize your newsletter wisely.

The front page is where you can make a real impression. You can start with a name for your newsletter that resonates with the people working under your wing, while still reflecting the company's brand and identity. This page is also where people see what's in the following pages, so making sure that you have interesting headlines lined up in the table of contents can work to your advantage.

INTRODUCING THE PIZZA-BOT 2000

Say Hello to More Pizzas!

This newsletter is a great space to talk about your employees' genuine concerns, such as company updates, events, and perks that they regularly look forward to. With this layout's easy-to-follow structure and design, creating content for your employees will be as easy as ever. Make sure you use the space wisely by using pictures and captions, too.

This doctype is meant to help our users create various business or project proposals and help them get approved. Proposals themes can be categorised per industry or function: marketing, agency (advertising or pr or design), event, retail, social media, website design, etc.

The Pizza-Bot 2000 speeds up the pizza-making process exponentially. Now we can make 300 pizzas per hour!

In creating this newsletter, it'll be helpful to keep in mind that the focus should be on the employees more than anything. While it's an opportunity for employees to hear from their higher-ups, it's also a chance to create a community that's built up on positive morale within the office. You can get started on that goal by dedicating a couple of pages of your newsletter to profiles on different departments, teams, and individuals and recognizing their most recent achievements. You can even invite more sociable aspects into the playing field by including pieces of fluff information, such as newlyweds and parents-to-be within the office.

Creating a newsletter that's of practical use around the office can also motivate your employees to peek into it every once in a while. In the final page, you can add a calendar of events that everybody can look forward to.

